PARK—G. A. GARDNER, IN "KARL."

Mr. Charles A. Gardner, who began a week's engagement at the Park yesterday, pleased two very large audiences by his cleverness as an actor and singer. His dialect is excellent, and his play, "Karl," affords him various opportunities to make an audience laugh. But it was his sweet singing that pleased those who heard him most. Without the reputation of J. K. Emmett, he is his equal in many things and his superior in not a few. His company assists him creditably, and the performance as a whole is one that is very entertaining. Mr. Gardner will continue at the Park next week, after which evening, and is likely to draw very large audiences.

MR. ROACH AS "DAN DARY."

The engagement of James C. Roach as "Dan Dary" for three nights and Saturday matinee at English's Opera-house, commencing next Thursday, promises to be an auspicious one for manager J. M. Hill, of the Union-square Theater, under whose direction Mr. Roach has already achieved success in other cities. Last season when "Dan Dary" was presented the press expressed good opinions, both as regards Mr. Roach's impersonation and the merits of his play, which is spoken of as replete with wholesome wit and humor, and as furnishing a whole picture of an Irish family.

Outlines of Institute Work.

Harvey M. LaFollette, Superintendent of Public Instruction, has issued the outlines for township institute work for 1888-9, and is sending them to the various county superintendents.

The outlines have been prepared by a committee, including a number of the most experienced and practiced superintendents in the State, and it is believed that they will prove practical and valuable to teachers, and that they will form an additional step in the advancement and uniform organization of the public schools of Indiana.

Two young men say they were unnecessarily interfered with by a policeman at the corner of Illinois and Market streets Sunday night. They were stopping on that corner, sitting away a few minutes with two friends, when the policeman came up and not only ordered them to move on, but attempted to search them. BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

A Batch of Routine Business and Renewal of the Electric Railway Question.

At the meeting of the Board of Aldermen last night the only action of Council that was opposed in any way was that authorizing the construction of an iron bridge on Willow street, over Pleasant run, to cost $2,045.

Alderman Taylor moved to have the matter referred to the committee on streets and alleys, believing that the work should not be ordered without further investigation. Alderman Laus farmed concurring in the Council's action, and presented a petition for the bridge signed by several hundred South-side citizens. He said there was no doubt about the bridge being needed, as a large tract of land below the run would never be improved until a structure of that kind was completed.

On motion of Alderman Smith, the question was settled affirmatively, and the bridge was ordered to be built.

The bridge will be constructed by the Indianapolis Bridge Company. The action of the Council requiring natural-gas companies that have taken up North Alabama street to place a thoroughfare in good condition, was concurred in.

The resolution requires the Street Commissioner to notify the gas companies to make the repairs, and if they do not, to have the work done, and collect the expense from the companies. There was also a unanimous concurrence in the Council resolution authorizing the Board of Trade to invite to the National Encampment, G. A. R., to meet in Indianapolis in 1889.

The committee on public property, through its chairman, Alderman Council, recommended that the action of Council authorizing the hiring of men and teams for the grading of Garfield Park be not concurred in, but proposed that the city civil engineer be authorized to advertise for bids for doing the work. The report was adopted.

When miscellaneous business was taken up Alderman Taylor moved a reconsideration of the McNees street-car ordinance. In doing so he stated that there was a desire on the part of the company and the people of the South Side to have the matter reopened. The company, he said, had agreed to lay tracks on the South Side and not north of Washington street, and as the people of the South Side needed and deserved better street-car facilities, he thought the ordinance should be amended to meet the wishes of the company and people. His motion prevailed by a unanimous vote, and the question was then referred to the committee on railroads and the city attorney. The board then adjourned.

Seventh-Day Adventists.

The Seventh-Day Adventists will begin their annual camp-meeting to-day, at Bruce's Grove, which lies at the northern terminus of the College-avenue street-car line. Already seventy tents have been erected by the workers and delegates, of whom some two hundred have arrived. More delegates are expected to reach the city during this forenoon from all parts of the State. There are now eight or ten ministers, among whom are Elders George I. Butler, president of the General Conference of the people; Uriah Smith, editor of the Review and Herald and professor of biblical exegesis of the Battle Creek (Mich.) College; J. O. Corlies, late of the Australian mission; G. P. Rappert, late of the South American mission, and C. Eldridge, superintendent of home missionary work.

There will be preaching three times a day, as follows: 10:30 A. M., 2:30 and 7:30 P. M., commencing this morning and continuing up to Monday evening, Sept. 17. Dr. J. H. Kellogg, superintendent of the well-known sanitarium of Battle Creek, Mich., and president of the American Health and Temperance Association, will be present to advance the interests of this important branch of work in this State. These people, whose tenets of faith are strongly Protestant, are, we learn, attracting no little attention throughout the world by their zeal and Christian determination.

MOVEMENT OF VETERANS.

The Crowded Trains Bearing the Thousands to the Encampment at Columbus.

The scenes about the Union Depot yesterday would have indicated to a foreigner that there was war in America. All day long one train after another was hurrying onward loaded to the steps with men clothed in blue, adorned with badges and bright, brass buttons. There was also continuous music from brass bands and an incessant rattle of drums. The only thing that did not indicate that the men were going on a campaign was the large number of women and children who accompanied them. On many trains they outnumbered the men. Altogether 8,000 or 10,000 veterans, their wives and children, must have passed through this city yesterday, on their way to the national encampment at Columbus, O. The Vandalla, L. B. & W., and I. & St. L., each took through from four to six long train-loads, and all the regular trains were crowded.

The veterans represented nearly every part of the West. The majority, however, came from Kansas and Iowa. The old soldiers could not forbear making a little politics with their trip, and the occupants of nearly every train that came in gave a cheer for Indianapolis and Harrison. Nearly all the soldiers were polled, and but few Cleveland men were found among them. On one of the L. B. & W. specials, last night, there were 297 Harrison men, and 247 for Cleveland. These on board were from the western part of Illinois. On another of the same road there were 247 for Harrison and 42 for Cleveland, while 8 were Prohibitionists. On the special from Rock Island, Ill., which arrived at night, there were 350 for Harrison, 135 for Cleveland, 11 for Fish, and two for Streeter. On the Vandalla special arriving at the same hour there were 321 for Harrison, 92 for Cleveland and 4 for Fish. Those on board were nearly all from Western Kansas, though there were a few from Sedalia, Mo. A Republican on the train expressed the opinion that if the Missourians were not along there wouldn't be a Cleveland man in the crowd.

The Women's Relief Corps met in by special train yesterday forenoon, and went out at noon by the Panhandle. The prominent ladies with the delegation were Mrs. Sarah M. Bradford, of Augusta, Ill., department president; Miss Josephine Cleveland, Springfield, department secretary, and Mrs. M. J. Stadler, representing the corps at large.

The Indianapolis posts left by a special over the L. B. & W. yesterday morning. The George H. Thomas, Geo. H. Chapman, Robert Anderson, John F. Ruckie, Joseph R. Gordon and Major Gordon posts, the last named from North Indianapolis, went as a body. They were accompanied by the Anderson Post drum corps and the Gibson county, Illinois, band. Among those who left as delegates to the encampment from Indianapolis were Col. I. P. Walker, Ira J. Chase and General McMillin. Gen. Tom Bennett, of Richmond, and D. M. Foster, of Fort Wayne, also accompanied the delegation. A number of posts from different parts of the State came to this city and took specials yesterday afternoon and last night.

CULLINGS FROM THE COURTS.

An Ex-Councilman's Wife Sues for Divorce and Support.

Maggie Dowling has filed a suit in the Superior Court for a divorce from her husband, James T. Dowling, formerly a member of the City Council. In the complaint she alleges that he has been an habitual drunkard for two years, has refused to provide for her, and has threatened to kill her. She says she stood his abuse for many months, hoping that he might reform him, but has abandoned all hope of being able to do so. In addition to the divorce she asks for the custody of her two children, both under seven years of age.

Grand Jury Report.

The county grand jury submitted a partial report yesterday. Indictments were returned against Edward S. Hoffman for killing James Peters; John Hart, who is charged with stealing a horse and buggy from Robert Kemp; Charles O. Perry, who is charged with the murder of Horace F. Wood; John Kelly for stealing a dog and revolver from Edward Duce; Ada Patterson, alias Alice King, for stealing silk dresses from Elizabeth Bragg; and against John A. Luther, Lulu March and George Pool for petit larceny. Those indicted are all in jail and will be given immediate trials.

The Long Jury Out.

The Long murder case is in the hands of the jury. The argument was concluded yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Will Martz and W. N. Harding spoke for the defense, and Major Mitchell for the State closed the argument. Judge Irvin's instructions were brief, and very fair to the accused. At 4:30 o'clock the jury retired, and late last night had not agreed upon a verdict. At 5 o'clock the jurors communicated with Judge Irvin, and stated that there were no indications of their reaching a verdict soon.

Settled with the Heirs.

William Porter, killed several weeks ago by falling from the I. & V. railroad bridge, held an insurance policy in the Travelers' Accident Company for $2,000. The deceased was afflicted with epilepsy, and as the company feared the disease had something to do with his death, full payment of the amount of the policy was refused. Yesterday the case was compromised by the company paying $1,000.

Long Time Getting There.

Another case of the inefficient mail service under Democratic administration was brought to light yesterday. On June 26 a letter containing a business proposition of importance was mailed at the Indianapolis postoffice by Milton Daily, manager of Hoover & Gamble's branch office, plainly addressed to Simmermaker & Blue, Royal Center, Ind. Yesterday it was returned to Mr. Daily, bearing the receipt postmark of Royal Center in distinct letters, showing that it was not received in that office before noon, and that it was not mailed there as to where the letter has been for the three months that have intervened, and the reason for its return. In a letter, yesterday, Mr. Daily made a complaint of the delay.

Senators would lead Republicans to hope that Mr. Thurman may continue to make free-trade speeches. Humanity compels them to pray the Cleveland managers to spare this feeble old man.

THIRTY-FOUR TIMES.

Fall and Winter Styles in Gents' Dress—The Opening To-Day—Full of Interesting Features.

"Nothing sure but death and expense," is a waggish observation of wide currency, but the inhabitants of the good city of Indianapolis have learned by long experience that another event is tolerably sure to happen, and that event is the season opening of gentlemen's fashions at Egan & Treat's, just as sure as the recurrence of the seasons themselves. The opening which is being celebrated to-day numbers the thirty-fourth in regular order of this house. The "opening" is altogether unique, as conducted by Egan & Treat. While most other establishments make such an event an advertising scheme for "revenue only," this firm eliminates that element entirely, and subordinates everything to the one object in hand—that of having to the public a truthful exposition of the reigning styles for that season. And the exposition is so complete that it goes to the point of displaying the patterns in the goods, whether of checks, plaids or the endless shades in plain goods, as well as to the style of cut and shape of the suit or garment to which these patterns are adapted. Everywhere in polite society an unwritten law has obtained regarding the prevailing style of dress, sanctioned by conventional usage, carrying with it an obligation as well as a charm, which can no more be ignored with impunity than the common demands of etiquette in other forms and properties of life. The styles upon which fashion has the present season bestowed her approving smile accomplish two things well; first, the exclusion of even the suggestion of exaggeration, and secondly, afford without doubtness the simplest opportunity for those having fondness for dress and the means to gratify it.

Without taking the considerable time and space to illustrate it, the fact may be stated that the tailors have never been quite so successful in getting beyond the reach or approach of the cheap class of imitators and clever ready-mades.

THE STYLES.

Not much space need be given to full-dress wear, as few would be bold enough to attempt to do so without consulting good authority in a tailor. The fact that such a costume if correct, will endure for years, seems to demand every attention and every penny laid out in the expense of providing it right, and it goes without saying it must be the eternal all-weather. Day-dress, of course, demands the double-breasted frock, and a buttoned waistcoat, with or without reason, the three or four-button cutaway coat. The double-breasted frock must be made with soft roll lapels, well peaked. Vests for day-dress may be of same material as coat, or of Marcelline or quiet cashmere. Trousers average nineteen and a half to twenty inches at knee, and a half to a inch to the bottom; should be of lighter color than coat, but extreme shades not permitted. Stripes or moderate checks are correct.

BUSINESS SUITS.

These are of the usual endless variety. The desired most popular are the three or four-button cutaway suit of mixed, checked, narrow-striped or overplaid worsted cashmere, vicuña or chevrot. The one-button cutaway is about gone out.

Sack suits will be considerably worn, according to taste and build. The coat loses in the end, only hinting the outline of the form, and 29 to 30 inches in length for the height.

A WINTER OVERCOAT.

Will come in a heavy Chesterfield averaging 40 inches in length, with velvet collar and velvet-bound edges and Montagues, elysiums and fur beavers for materials. A double-breasted overcoat, of gray or blue, with a buttoned waistcoat, and a three or four-button cutaway coat. The Chesterfield, with well-peaked lapels, velvet collar and edges of tubular cord or velvet, flat-brimmed or round in cloth. The cape collar will also come in demand for stormy weather, with the coat thereof single-breasted, loose and long, almost to the ankles.

For day dress the Surcoat will be more or less worn, but for evening the Inverness will prevail, for the double reason of ease in putting on or off and its unobtrusiveness as an overgarment. It is styled in several ways, but the most finished soft and free roll, so as to close high on chest or low, as preferred. Those rolling low must throw loose goods to the edge of collar. This "roll" is as much a part of style as length, form or finish.

A welcome feature of the opening is Mr. Tom P. Egan presiding at his place, in charge of the cutting department. The reason will add to the trade of the house, as well as greatly please the old customers.

The heads of the house are in high feather over what they deem an unsatisfactory season of a large trade this fall and winter. As expressed by one of them, "Indiana has had a phenomenal year in all the circles, which must lodge a great deal of money in the channels of trade."

Being important to give the desired attention to all visitors in one day, the opening will be continued indefinitely, and through the ensuing State fair, during which out-of-town visitors are cordially invited to visit the establishment.
